EMPLOYMENT AND CRIME

And the Only Practical Way to Abolish Both.

In the eyes of most people the unemployed are the worst of criminals, and if one of their number commits a crime, the whole of them are condemned. The system denies the worker the right to earn his livelihood, and then condemns him to get off the earth. Unemployment, poverty, and want are the result of the capitalist mode of production; without the means of obtaining shelter, homes despoiled, men and women become nomads, wanderers on the face of the earth, whose home is the public highway and byway. And now it is proposed that they be driven from these public places, and where they are to go is not stated. The Socialists, after all, are the only practical people in this lopsided world. In Socialism lies the remedy for unemployment and want, and all that flows therefrom. There is only one place that they can drive them to and that is into the sea. Even this would only culminate in failure to blot out the evil. Socialism is the only hope; all else illusion.

"There is nothing impossible only that men's minds are not made up,"—Confucius.

"In every organism the parts exist for the sake of the whole, not the whole for the sake of the parts. The parts have no meaning except in their relation to the whole."—Aristotle.

"The law has never yet been anything else but the blunderbuss of the privileged robber held to the laborer's head. Let them know that the earth from which they are created is the common property of all men and that, therefore, the fruits of the earth belong indiscriminately to all. Those who make private property of the gift of God pretend in vain to be innocent. For in thus retaining the substance of the poor, they are the murderers of those who die daily for want of it."—Pope Gregory the Great.

"When legislation rivets a chain to the feet of a free citizen, enslaving him in spite of the rights of nature, eternal justice rivets the last link of that chain found on the tyrant's neck."—S. Just.

"The only possible way to make people good is to create the requisite materialistic conditions."—Thomas Paine.

A SERMON FROM THE OPERATING TABLE.

John Bauduy, lying on the operating table in Bellevue hospital on the 11th inst., while the red blood flowed from an incision in his wrist into that of his unconscious brother Louis, in an attempt to save the latter's life after a severe asphyxiation, bore heroic witness to the truth of Socialist philosophy.

Long and loud do the enemies of Socialism raise their voices to cry that Socialism is impossible because of "human nature." "Human nature" being, they claim evil and grasping, the system, once established, would be cold like a house of cards under the selfishness of its own members; the strong and the greedy will again seize the upper hand, and we'll be back again where we are now.

All of which Joan Bauduy on his hospital table, eloquently though mutely, refutes. Human nature is not bad but good; not corrupt, but under adverse circumstances corruptible. Man in past ages and the present has been largely corrupted and his selfishness, making countless thousands mourn. But there has been a reason for it.

In all past ages man has had to fight with his brother for a livelihood. The earth, with the deficient knowledge and machinery applicable to it, was unable to produce enough for all her teeming children. Under such circumstances, where selfishness meant death, of course man was turned selfish in spite of his conscience.

Even at that time there have always been stuck out shining examples of disinterestedness. But today, the mechanical knowledge, the skill, and the organizing ability of the race has rendered possible a plenty for all. Let once the hampers of capitalist ownership be broken off and that plenty will be not producible only, but actually produced. Under such circumstances, selfishness will no longer become a handicap in the struggle for life. Freed from a hostile environment, liberated from the corrupting necessity of selfishness, man's nature will then for the first time in history assert its goodness, unsullied, universally.

John Bauduy, rising high enough above even his present hostile environment to give his life's blood for his brother, proves it.—De Leon.

DISORGANIZERS

"It is very agreeable to me to meet Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Gompers and other labor leaders here tonight," said the president-elect at the annual dinner of the National Civic Federation on the 15th of this month, with his most winsome smile. Of course the sight is agreeable to Taft. It is a guarantee, at least a promise of more such sights, indicative of more such presidential campaigns, in which the lion of TAO appears as a New England village gossip. Here man has been seen through, in which labor will be found so utterly disorganized as to be stampeded into voting solidly for the plutocratic capitalist class.

Miss Westford, who is one of the most promising club women of the day, and who has spoken before all the representative clubs of the country, appears as a New England village gossip. Here man has been seen through, in which labor will be found so utterly disorganized as to be stampeded into voting solidly for the plutocratic capitalist class.

Joseph M. Sparks, so long a favorite as May Irvin's leading comedian, also appears in "50 Miles From Boston."

Pettie Hazel Lowry, enacts the role of the demure village postmistress, which is said to be well suited to her dainty personality. Mr. Cohen has given her a charming song, "Black and Blue," in which she appears with a group of "Small Town Girls." Thomas Emory, who has appeared

In stock companies in Boston, Milwaukee and Denver, and who last year was with "The Three of Us," has a prominent part in the Cohan play.

Another player well known in San Francisco, Spokane, Tacoma and Denver is Walter P. Richardson, who appears in "50 Miles From Boston." After the earthquake, Mr. Richardson came east and has since played in "When Knighthood Was In Flower," and with the Adelaide Kelm company in New York.

Master Russell Pincus, "the fat boy," who is said to be one of the cleverest children in the business, has a good role, while the youngest member of the company is Master Percy Helton, the talented little English chap, who made such a hit as "Buster Brown," and as the saucy messenger boy with Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in "Julie Bon Bon."

GIRL OBSERVES NEW YEAR SWIMMING IN NEW YORK BAY

New York, Jan. 2.—Although she remained in the water more than twenty minutes, Miss Helen Wilcox of Staten Island, who went swimming in New York bay yesterday, feels no ill effects from her experience today. She is 22 years old and teaches school here in the city. Her plunge followed a wager made with a girl friend a year ago that she would be the first person to take a dip in the bay in 1909. As she lives near the water's edge, it was little trouble to do a bathing suit and slip into the water from her back yard.
